Date: 6th December 2010 at 11:00

Place: NGCCI Office, Naxal

NGCCI organizes in cooperation with the FNCCI Employers’ Council an interaction program about “Overview of the existing Labour Law provisions in comparison to the proposed new Labour Act”.

Due to the recent social and political developments in Nepal the labour entrepreneur relations became one of the most crucial issues for the further progress of Nepal’s economic development. As labour is a decisive factor in the production process its disruption can lead to substantial problems for all company’s stakeholders - and with focus on the export sector, it determines directly the export capacities of the company. Furthermore, the labour situation in a country plays an important role in the decision process of foreign investors to start business cooperation in a country.

Labour issues have seen a lot of changes, new laws have been enacted, new instruments and methods to prevent and resolve disputes and conflicts have been introduced to Nepal and the awareness of the economic stakeholders rose significantly.

With the objective to support the export capacities of its member companies NGCCI organizes in cooperation with the FNCCI Employers’ Council - the permanent organ of FNCCI for industrial relation issues including labour law and industrial disputes - an interaction program on “Overview of the existing Labour Law provisions in comparison to the proposed new Labour Act”. The interaction program aims to inform NGCCI Members about the recent labour law situation, the challenges and propositions for the future and about ways to prevent and resolve disputes in order to maintain the production process.
